South Carolina Philharmonic

December 2016
through May 2017

The Symphony League is an organization of women and men deeply committed to promoting appreciation of the arts for over fifty-one years. As a benefactor of the SC Philharmonic, our contributions are raised through several events hosted by the Symphony League each year. We support the SC Philharmonic, three youth orchestras, The Arthur Fraser International Piano Competition held during the USC School of Music's Southeastern Piano Festival and the Link-Up program created by Carnegie Hall's Weill Institute to introduce children to great music. Over 10,000 children have interacted with this program. We have awarded young musicians and music educators through the Cornelia Freeman Young Musician Award and the Marjorie Stands Music Educators Award. In addition, The Symphony League entertains with receptions for donors and the SC Philharmonic Orchestra and general membership meetings in the homes of members.
